

Pledge corner

Public, private and voluntary sector organisations are embracing informal adult learning by signing up to the Learning Revolution Pledge. More than 2,000 organisations have pledged through the BIS website and over 3,000 individual libraries, museums and archives have pledged through the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council.

Milton Keynes Libraries has pledged its support for the Learning Revolution and is building closer links between libraries, adult learning and heritage organisations.

As a result 'Our Place MK', the annual showcase for heritage organisations, was held at the Central Library with stalls, demonstrations, talks and a newly formed 'electric picture palace' showcasing local films. The library hummed with activity all day – creating more learning opportunities for more people. It has also filmed vox pops of people talking about informal learning, click here

Norfolk and Norwich Millennium Library has signed the pledge and forged a new partnership with the Forum Trust to support the 'What Next?' team at Fusion, the biggest digital gallery in Europe. Fusion offers free access to photography, art and community led projects.

'What Next?' advises the public on how to develop interests sparked by the productions they have seen. About 50 members of the public a week are referred from 'What Next?' to the library.

One elderly lady interested in family history who had come to a dead-end when she couldn't find the date of her Grandmother's death was referred from the 'What Next?' team to the library and was helped to find the answer. A man who wanted to find out about Great Yarmouth seafront and the Hippodrome Circus was helped to use a computer at the library to find the information.

To make the Learning Revolution Pledge, click here

If you would like more information on any of the articles in this newsletter or if you would like to add a name to our mailing list, email revolutions@bis.gsi.gov.uk. And please forward Revolutions on to anyone you think might be interested.

This email was sent to info@e-c-a.ac.uk. You can instantly unsubscribe from these emails by clicking here.